Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet

BY VICE ADM. J. J. BALLENTINE, Commander

THE Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, with Headquarters at the Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Virginia, is one of the Type Commands of the Atlantic Fleet and as such is primarily engaged in training and providing logistic support to all aircraft squadrons, aircraft carriers and sea plane tenders assigned to the Atlantic Fleet.

VADM. BALLENTINE

To assist him in his mission, Commander Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet has four major sub-commanders in addition to the Carrier Division Commanders. First, Commander Fleet Air Wings, Atlantic, is charged with the responsibility of training and supporting all multi-engine land-based and sea-based patrol planes and airships. These forces are given basic training in the United States and then deployed throughout the Atlantic including the Mediterranean. A similar function for carrier type aircraft is performed by the Fleet Air Commands of which there are three, Fleet Air Quonset, Fleet Air Norfolk, (currently commanded by Commander Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet as an additional duty) and Fleet Air Jacksonville. Their responsibility lies generally in the area indicated. A fifth command, known as Fleet Air Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, is primarily responsible for providing logistic support of aviation units operating in the Mediterranean.

Description of Forces

Approximately (41) different types of aircraft, including fighters, attack, anti-submarine, long-range patrol (land and sea), transports, trainers, helicopters and airships are operated from about 25 bases throughout the Atlantic and Mediterranean. (Please turn to Page 1041)

Air Secy. Urges Pay Boost to Save Money

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott this week told Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson that the Government could save $100,000,000 annually by a 10 per cent boost in the Air Force reenlistment rate and called for a pay raise to help achieve this objective.

In a semi-annual report covering the period which ended 31 Dec., Secretary Talbott stated:

"Higher rates of reenlistment of airmen and extension of tours of duty of officers will require special reenlistment bonuses, adjustments upwards in pay, better housing and restoration of fringe benefits, such as commissaries, post exchanges and medical care of dependents, where such have been eliminated."

Secretary Wilson observed that "some means must be found to reduce the high rate of personnel turnover, which is increasing costs, lowering morale, and, above all, depriving the Armed Forces of the experience essential to maximum efficiency."

Mr. Wilson said that "firm long-range policies covering the conditions under which military personnel will serve should help to attract more capable personnel and lead to longer periods of service, thus paying off in greater effective military strength as well as in lower cost."

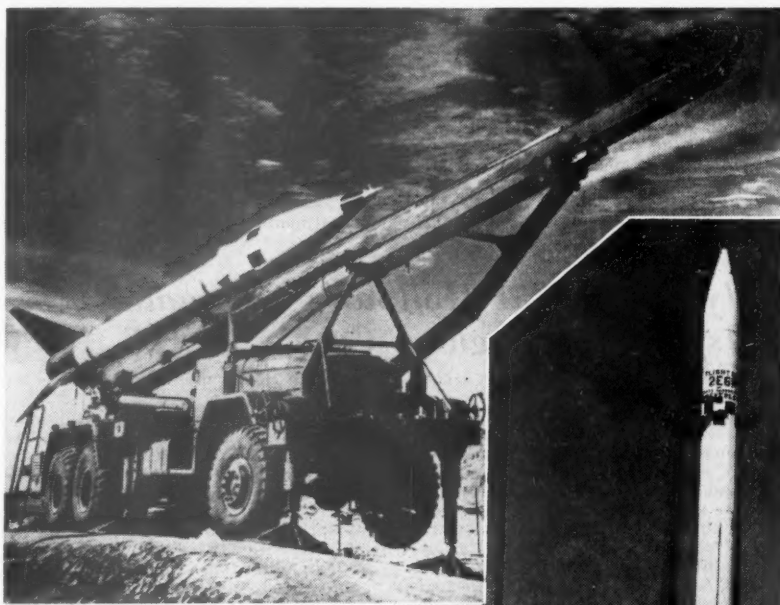

The Defense Secretary said proposals will be made to Congress "to make military service more attractive as a career," but he did not spell out details.

Mr. Talbott reported that a survey conducted among 175,000 airmen eligible for discharge in the next year showed that only 24 per cent indicated they would reenlist, with 27 per cent undecided. The remainder said they did not want to reenlist.

He said that in addition to saving the

Gen. Twining Named to NACA

President Eisenhower this week nominated General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, to be a member of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, succeeding Lt. Gen. Lawrence Craigie, who has been assigned as NATO air commander in Southern Europe.

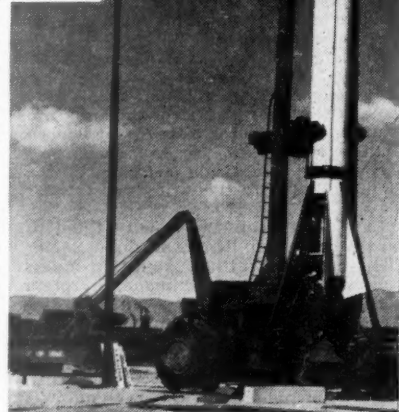

EXERCISE FLASH BURN at Ft. Bragg, N. C., will be highlighted by use of two new weapons in the Army's arsenal—the Corporal Guided Missile (right) and the Honest John Artillery Rocket (above). Here are the official descriptions of the new weapons, as released by the Army:—

CORPORAL

Equipped with either an atomic or conventional type warhead, the Corporal is a surface-to-surface guided missile capable of engaging tactical targets far beyond the ranges of artillery or the new 280 mm gun and "Honest John" rocket. The weapon gives the field commander far greater firepower on the battlefield and enables him to strike selected targets deep in the enemy rear areas.

The Corporal follows a ballistic trajectory in its flight to the target. Weather and visi-

Extend USCOA Election

The Senate voted this week to extend the election period under the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act until 1 Nov. 1954.

The measure (HR 8539), previously passed by the House, now goes to the White House for the President's signature.

The USCOA (or Survivor Benefits Act as it is sometimes called) permits military personnel to take a reduced retirement pay and thereby provide an annuity for their surviving dependents.

The section which is amended by HR 8539 requires active duty personnel, who have completed 18 years of service, to make an election by 30 April of this year as to whether they wish to participate.

GOLD LEAF FOR ARMY CAPS GAINS FAVOR

The Army Uniform Board has voted to recommend to Secretary Robert T. Stevens use of gold leaf trimming on the visor of caps worn by officers in the rank of lieutenant colonel and above with the new Army Green uniform.

Company grade officers and warrant officers would wear the same plain black visor as enlisted men, but all officer caps will have a gold chin strap.

The gold leaf trimming, if approved, would have two arcs of gold leaves in groups of two, the same as now used on the dress cap. Similarly, gold leaf trimming for general officers would be used around the crown of the cap, as is the case with the dress cap worn by general officers.

Study is being made of the feasibility of using nylon cord instead of the more expensive gold bullion, most of which is imported from France.

Family Medical Care Will Be Slashed In Norfolk As Medical Strength Drops

Out-patient medical care for Navy dependents will be eliminated at the Norfolk, Va., Naval Air Station infirmary, and slashed more than 50 per cent at the Portsmouth Naval Hospital by 1 July according to predictions by medical officers.

RAdm. Sterling S. Cook, MC, USN, commanding officer of the Portsmouth Hospital, referring to the serious shortage of medical officers, is reported by Mr. Lloyd Parker, staff member of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot as stating that "a major miracle will have to occur to take up the loss."

The infirmary currently averages about 72,000 out-patient treatments a year. The Portsmouth Naval Hospital had 86,025 out-patient treatments last year, Mr. Parker reported in his article.

Five doctors, now assigned to out-patient care at the hospital, are scheduled to receive detachment orders, without replacements, before 1 July. At present, the hospital has 19 full-time and three part-time doctors taking care of military dependents.

The Norfolk Naval Air Station has already been cut from 20 to 15 medical officers. Three are scheduled to leave 1 May and two others have received orders which will reduce the staff to 10. Two more officers are "looking for orders."

"When we get down to eight doctors, there won't be a single one available for out-patient treatment," Dr. S. C. Bostic, USN, senior medical officer at the infirmary said.

At a conference held at Portsmouth Naval Hospital on 14 April, Admiral Cook told reporters that the loss of doctors at the institution "will force a reduction in the quantity but not the quality of medical care for dependents, and will not curtail treatment of service personnel at all."

Admiral Cook said that there will be no curtailment of maternity services for dependents. He said that eye examinations to secure glasses will be discontinued for adults, but will be continued for children. Pediatrics will continue for the present, except there will be no "well-baby" clinic. Only babies who are "actually" sick will be treated.

The out-patient medical clinic will be discontinued 1 May for all dependents seeking internal medical care.

All surgery will be continued at present.

At the Norfolk Naval Air Station, where medical care for Navy dependents is to be cut completely, the situation is more serious, the newspaper article related. The air station infirmary now averages 140 out-patient children a day at the Pediatric Clinic alone. The facility averages about 80 patients a morning, three mornings a week, at its prenatal clinic. There is an average of 15 new cases each week.

At present the baby clinic is so busy that it must turn away some of the cases.

"Since we know we will be down to eight doctors by 10 May," Doctor Bostic said, "we are not taking any additional appointments. When we get down to eight we just won't see civilians at all."

Only 15% of '51 Holloway Graduates Aspire For Regular Career In U.S. Navy

Only 15 per cent of the Navy's second class of Holloway Plan graduates have elected careers in the Regular Navy.

The Bureau of Naval Personnel has announced that 205 members of the NROTC class (which originally numbered 1400 and now includes 1,365 active duty officers) will remain as career officers.

The number, although still below the Navy's planned goal of at least 25 per cent, is five per cent greater than it was in 1953. As initially disclosed in THE JOURNAL, only 10 per cent (80 out of 800) of the first group were willing to stay in the Navy as career men.

Recently, Admiral R. B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, told a House Appropriations Subcommittee that "One gauge of the effectiveness of this program is that legislation has been introduced at the request of the Department of Defense, to extend the features of the Holloway plan to the Army and the Air Force."

Early last year, the Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel, Rear Adm. J. F. Bolger (who has since retired), said that unless successful efforts were made to retain the Holloway officers in a career status "The future of the Regular NROTC Program (the Holloway Plan) itself is at stake."

Since 1946 when the first Holloway Plan class entered college, the Navy has commissioned almost 10,000 young officers who completed subsidized educations under the program. Additionally, four other classes (one of which will graduate this Spring) are now enrolled at colleges and universities throughout the country.

When Admiral Bolger emphasized the "acute need for career officers from NROTC sources" a year ago, he said, "Because of the limited capacity of the Naval Academy and the need for great numbers of career officers to operate the Navy at its present size, Regular NROTC graduates are currently being commissioned at a ratio of approximately three to one for Naval Academy officers."

Under the terms of the Holloway Plan (named for the present Chief of Naval Personnel, Vice Adm. James L. Holloway, jr.), the Navy provides free, four-year college scholarships (including subsistence) to selected applicants.

Of the 205 who have applied for Regular commissions, 148 are in the general Line, 41 in Line aviation, and 16 in the Supply Corps.

Warning that "the present emergency may become acute at any time," the Defense Department this week asked for an extension of its power to expand and maintain both Government and private war plants.

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, acting for the Defense Department, said peacetime authority of the military "is not sufficiently broad to provide facilities that will be needed when an emergency occurs."

In a letter to the President of the Senate, the Army Secretary noted that "Expansion of both Government-owned and privately-owned plants became necessary in the emergencies that occurred prior to World War II and with the advent of the Korean conflict."

He said, "Under the existing international situation, the present emergency may become acute at any time without warning."

If such an eventuality should develop, Mr. Stevens said, "time would be a large and very significant factor in the expansion of urgently needed productive capacity." He added that in the event of full mobilization, a lack of adequate productive capacity for essential military items requiring a long-lead production time "would create a serious bottleneck."

The present authority of the Services to expand and maintain the productive capacity of war plants expires on 1 July. However, Mr. Stevens noted "Even though a truce exists in the Korean conflict, the present world situation is similar in many respects" to that which led to enactment of the present law.

The Defense Department proposal would extend the duration of the effectiveness of the present law until six months after the termination of the present emergency, "or until such time as may be specified by concurrent resolution of the Congress, whichever is the earliest."

DEFEND ARMY, NAVY PROMOTION SYSTEMS

The relative merits of the Navy and Army reserve promotion systems were warmly debated this week before the Senate Armed Services Committee by Major Generals Ellard A. Walsh and Melvin Maas.

General Maas, Chairman of the Board of the Marine Corps Reserve Association, indicated that if the Navy's running-mate system should be adopted for all of the Reserve forces it would smooth out many of their promotion problems.

General Walsh, President of the National Guard Association, said he isn't "impressed with the arguments that the Navy plan will resolve all difficulties." He said the National Guard has 200 general officers and that the Marine Corps until recently had only one Reserve general (General Maas) and that the Navy had only one Reserve flag officer during World War II.

General Maas said the Congress had prevented the Navy and Marine Corps from promoting more Reserve officers to flag and general rank, and both Services now are creating more Reserve flag billets. He said the lack of Reserve flag officers in the Navy and Marine Corps was not the fault of the Navy promotion system.

General Walsh said: "The arithmetic still speaks for itself."

Nomination Holds Up JAGC's Retirement

President Eisenhower has nominated Brig. Gen. Claude B. Mickelwait, JAGC, a permanent colonel, to be Assistant Judge Advocate General of the Army with rank of major general, in the Regular Army as well as Army of the United States.

General Mickelwait, who will be 60 in July, had been listed among the permanent colonels with more than 30 years service and 5 years in permanent grade to be retired this September. His promotion would mean retention on the active list.

Assistant Judge Advocate General since April 1947, General Mickelwait served as a top JAG officer in North Africa and Europe at the time General Eisenhower was in command of forces there.

Approve AsstSecDef And Defense Counsel

The Senate this week confirmed the nominations of Thomas Potter Pike to be Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics) and former Governor Wilbur Marion Brucker of Michigan to be General Counsel of the Defense Department.

Mr. Pike has served as Deputy Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics) since September of last year. He will succeed Assistant Secretary Charles S. Thomas who becomes Secretary of the Navy on 1 May.

Governor Brucker, a WWI infantry officer, succeeded Assistant Secretary of Defense H. Struve Hensel, former General Counsel.

Mr. Pike was born in Los Angeles on 12 Aug. 1909, and was graduated from Stanford University in 1931 with a degree in Economics. He later became associated with the Republic Supply Co. of Calif., and left that organization in 1938 to form the T. P. Pike Drilling Co., which he has headed since that time. He also is Vice President of the Casualty Insurance Co. of Calif., and a former director of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Governor Brucker was born in Saginaw, Michigan, on 23 June 1894, and was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1916 with an LL.B. degree. He served as Assistant Prosecuting Attorney and Prosecuting Attorney for Saginaw County, Mich., and became Assistant Attorney General of the State in 1927. Subsequently, he served as Attorney General and Governor. Since 1933, he has been a practicing attorney with the law firm of Clark, Klein, Brucker and Waples. He also is Director of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Detroit. During WWI, he served in France with the 166th Infantry, 42d (Rainbow), Division, in engagements including Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, and the Meuse-Argonne, and was cited by General Headquarters and awarded the Silver Star. He is a past national president of the Rainbow Division Veterans.

Sec. Def. OKs Two Asst. Secs. For Navy

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has given quick and complete O.K. to plans for reorganization of the Navy—including addition of two new assistant secretaries—but simultaneously he said the three-month old Army Reorganization Report is still "under study."

A similar study from the Air Force, aimed at aligning Department organization with Reorganization Plan No. 6, is expected shortly, Mr. Wilson told his news conference this week.

The Navy study, with which the Secretary said he was "very pleased," would have Assistant Secretaries for Comptroller, Materiel, Personnel, and Air.

At the present time, the Assistant Secretary for Air James H. Smith also handles personnel matters, while Assistant Secretary Robert H. Fogler is responsible, with Under Secretary Thomas S. Gates, for the other activities.

Full details of the Navy plan will be made public next week, Secretary Wilson said.

Meantime, it is evident that the controversy developed by the report of the Army Reorganization Committee in January has not yet been resolved.

Among the major recommendations of this study were appointment of an additional assistant secretary (the Army now has two); designation of a Vice Chief of Staff for Supply; and establishment of a Continental Command to replace Army Field Forces.

The report also said that there have been cases where Defense Department officials have by-passed the Secretary of the Army.

THE JOURNAL disclosed on 30 Jan. that the Civilian Committee which prepared the Army Reorganization study reconvened in an unusual session after the document was submitted to Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens with unanimous endorsement of Committee members.

Mr. Paul L. Davies, a prominent industrialist, chairman of the Committee, was asked to comment on allegations that the report was modified and to tell why the name of Deputy Defense Secretary Roger M. Kyes did not appear on the list of those who appeared before the group.

Mr. Davies said the report was "edited" at the meeting of the Committee on 5 Jan. (the report was dated 18 Dec.). He said "careful analysis of this Report revealed a few instances wherein the basic concepts of the Committee might be misconstrued due primarily to the use of terms subject to possible varying interpretation."

He said that Mr. Kyes "did not talk to the Committee as a witness and accordingly was not so listed in the final report."

Whether final decisions on the Davies Report will be made before Mr. Kyes leaves office on 1 May, or whether Deputy Secretary-Designate Robert B. Anderson, now Navy Secretary, will participate in these decisions, is not certain.

However, it was obvious this week that the Davies Committee, in clearing up "use of terms subject to possible varying interpretation" on 5 Jan. for its report dated 18 Dec., did not by that act assure speedy action—certainly not as speedy as that accorded the Navy study.

Maj. Gen. Parker Named Head of AMF in Europe

Maj. Gen. Lewis R. Parker, USAF, director of Supply and Services at Headquarters Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, has been appointed commander of the newly created Air Materiel Force in Europe with headquarters at Wiesbaden, Germany.

He will be succeeded at Wright-Patterson by Brig. Gen. Frederick J. Dau, now deputy director for Supply and Services.

The Air Materiel Force in Europe which General Parker will head was established as a result of the reorganization of the Air Force Logistics system.

Patterned after the organization structure of AMC in the United States and the Far East Logistics Force, it will consist of the headquarters at Wiesbaden, and three Air Materiel Areas located at Burtonwood Royal Air Force Station, England; the Chateauroux Air Depot, France, and Nousseur Air Base, French Morocco.

Under the reorganization, the logistics functions have been transferred from the combat commands to the Air Materiel Force in Europe. General Parker will be responsible to Lt. Gen. William E. Tunner, commander-in-chief of the USAFE, and former vice commander of the AMC.

Prior to going to Headquarters AMC, General Parker was commander of the San Bernardino Air Materiel Area, Calif.

Senate Restores Promotion-Retirement Privileges; White House OK Expected

Promotion and retirement privileges for officers of the Armed Services will be restored late this month or early in May when President Eisenhower signs the new Officer Grade Limitations Act of 1954.

The measure—known as the Arends Bill—was passed by the Senate without amendment on 19 April. It previously had been passed by the House on 11 March, and is expected to receive quick Presidential approval.

Prior to passage of the bill this week, Chairman Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass) of the Senate Armed Services Committee told the Senate the measure will provide "specific and realistic numerical control over the promotions in all the services."

He noted that it repeals "the so-called Van Zandt amendment... limiting voluntary retirement" and "the so-called Davis amendment" limiting promotions. He said the measure "is fairer to the officers and fairer to the Congress because it provides better opportunity for officers to advance."

As reported in THE JOURNAL, the bill:

1—Places legal ceilings on the number of officers who may serve on active duty in the grades of major, lieutenant commander and above in each of the Services, predicated on a sliding-scale basis which changes as the total strength fluctuates.

2—Reinstates the 20-year retirement privilege which has been suspended since early in the Korean war.

3—Permits better long-range personnel planning, thereby assuring more stable promotion opportunities.

4—Establishes higher percentages of Navy nurses who may serve in the rank of commander and lieutenant commander.

Reserve Promotion Bill Must Await Draft Of Stronger Reserve Program

Final approval of a permanent promotion law for Reserve officers hit a snag this week when the Defense Department asked that Senate consideration of the measure "be temporarily set aside."

Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah requested the delay on the basis that no promotion program for Reservists can be "intelligently" decided until plans are completed to provide a more adequate Reserve force.

The new program to strengthen the Reserves will be presented to the National Security Council next week.

Dr. Hannah said the Department will be in a better position to discuss the promotion bill on 10 May. By that date, he said, the Reserve Training Program should be ready to send to Congress.

Senate Armed Services Committee members learned from Dr. Hannah, however, that the Defense Department is "opposed" to certain provisions in the Reserve promotion bill (HR 6573; the Reserve Officer Personnel Act).

Chief objections to the House-passed measure, Secretary Hannah told the Committee, are in the methods prescribed by the bill for relative precedence of Reserve officers called to active duty, and in the permanent promotion features.

Certain of these provisions, he said, "are intolerable to one or more of the Services."

The "relative precedence" feature, for example, would "create a false rank structure," and would serve to "lower the prestige of the Regular forces," he said.

On the basis of Secretary Hannah's request, Chairman Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass) asked the Services to file their prepared statements with the Committee so they can be studied by the Committee staff and representatives of Reserve and National Guard associations. Hearings on the measure will be continued after the new Reserve Training Plan is presented on 10 May.

Defense Expected To Ask Involuntary Service In Reserve and National Guard

Active duty Reservists may be required to serve involuntarily in the Reserve and National Guard as the result of a plan which is to be submitted to the National Security Council next week.

Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah disclosed on 22 April that the Attorney General has been asked to rule on two controversial questions affecting a new Reserve Training Program which is to be presented to Congress early in May. These questions are:

1—Does Congress have Constitutional authority to assign Reservists involuntarily to the National Guard program?

2—Can men be drafted for six months' training and then be required to serve in the Reserve units or the National Guard for an extended period of training?

Secretary Hannah said the Defense Department has held up a report to the National Security Council and the President until these questions are answered. He told the Senate Armed Services Committee that detailed plans to strengthen the Nation's inadequate Reserve forces will be presented to the NSC when the ruling is received.

The report, to be submitted by Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, Chairman of a special committee which made an intensive study of present Reserve forces, will recommend a "more important" role for the Reserves, Dr. Hannah said.

He said the report will contain recommendations for the proper size and composition of two reserve categories, the preparation of plans for the establishment of such categories, the development of programs to provide for their adequate training and a plan for the call-up of an "immediately callable reserve."

A special task force of senior military officers directed by Maj. Gen. Walter W. Wensinger, USMC, has been at work on the report since mid-January. Other members are Maj. Gen. William E. Hall, USAF, Rear Adm. Kenmore M. McManes, USN, Brig. Gen. Rinaldo VanBrunt, USA, and Rear Adm. James A. Hirshfield, USCG.

Army Selection Boards Will Consider 8,000 For Temp. Ranks; New Promotions Due

The Army early next month will convene selection boards to consider roughly 2000 captains for temporary promotion to major and 6000 first lieutenants for advancement to captain.

Late this month, the Army will release between 2500 and 3000 temporary promotions to lieutenant colonel, major and captain.

The new selections will also include some WAC majors to lieutenant colonel.

However, the lack of vacancies will preclude any new selections to lieutenant colonel and colonel, the Army said.

The "fully qualified" method of selection will be employed by all Selection Boards with the exception of those appointed to recommend officers of the Army Nurse Corps to the temporary grade of major and those of the WAC for temporary promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel. The "best qualified" method of selection will be employed by these two Selection Boards.

Officers recommended by the boards for promotion will be advanced to the appropriate grade as vacancies and budgetary considerations permit, the Army said.

Here are the zones of consideration for the new selection board action:

TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL

An Army spokesman said that on the Army Promotion List, the new criteria represent a two months extension of the zone to major compared with the last selection and 8 months extension for selection to captain.

Service PIO Funds Face Heavy Cut; Major Share To Come From Field

Defense officials have laid before Congress a plan to cut military public information funds by almost one-fourth during fiscal '55, and to eliminate approximately 41 civilian and 179 military positions from the Defense information program.

A major share of the cut will be absorbed by field PIO activities of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

At the same time, a new "coordinating" unit will be established within the Office of the Secretary of Defense to handle top policy decisions on public information matters. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said he is asking the three military departments to select one man each for this purpose.

The Army, Navy and Air Force representatives (no mention was made of Marine Corps representation) will serve directly under Mr. Walter Swan, Deputy for Public Affairs to Assistant Secretary of Defense Fred A. Seaton.

Proposed cuts in PIO field activities:

•The Navy will lose $221,584 and 40 officers. $143,804 and 25 officers will be dropped from ZI activities and $77,780 and 15 officers from overseas activities.

•The Air Force will lose $220,000, two civilians and 50 uniformed members from its field PIO program. One civilian, 23 officers and $89,690 will be dropped from ZI activities and one civilian, 27 officers and $130,310 from overseas activities.

•Army PIO field funds will be cut $160,000 and 34 military and 14 civilian PIOs will be eliminated. The plan envisions a cut of $84,090 in ZI funds, plus the elimination of 10 civilians and 16 officers, and in overseas funds a cut of $76,000, four civilians, and 19 officers.

Within the Office of Public Information (OSD) at the Pentagon, funds will be cut by $227,395 and each of the Services will be asked to provide only 13 officers instead of the 25 each which they now provide. Funds have been requested for 70 civilians but Assistant Secretary Seaton said "We contemplate attempting to operate with 50."

According to Secretary Wilson the new organization under Mr. Swan has been planned to pull public information personnel "closer together than they have been" and to eliminate duplication. "Where there has been any duplication," he said, "we can do the work over here (OSD) for all three (Services)."

The three top men assigned by the Services "will be responsible for coordinating public information activities at the Department of Defense level," Mr. Wilson said, and OPI will be charged with "carrying out the policies and the activities that are determined to be proper centralized ones."

The Defense Secretary added that the three officers "will be under the guidance of their respective military departments but are to understand that they have an overriding responsibility to contribute to and cooperate with the public information planning of the central organization. This is essential in order to provide the closest coordination at all times."

Mr. Seaton said the new plan "is not designed to close any proper doors to public information" but "is designed to tighten up our protection against security violations." He feels that the present structure is "an unwieldy organization" which "takes entirely too long in many cases to get the proper information out."

In addition to the cuts within the Defense Department's OPI and at field installations of the three Services, the main public information offices of the Army, Navy and Air Force also will be cut.

The Navy Office of Public Information, under RADM. Lewis Parks, will lose $41,021, two civilians and five officers.

The Air Force Office of Public Information, under Maj. Gen. Sory Smith, will lose $25,000, three civilians and gain two officers.

The Army Office of Public Information, under Maj. Gen. Gilman C. Mudgett, will lose $104,910, five civilians and 15 officers.

Secretary Wilson said these three offices "will confine their attention to items of interest within their own service and will be expected to make use of the consolidated activities. They will also be expected to coordinate their activities with the central office of public information and assist this office as may be required."

Mr. Wilson said the planned cut has been approved by the BOB.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Army Asks Integration Of JAGC List To Increase Promotion Opportunities

Better promotion opportunities for Judge Advocate General Corps officers of the Army is requested in a proposal to the Congress this week by Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens.

As drafted, the proposal would integrate the JAGC promotion list with that of the Army, thereby restoring the seniority and grade which JAGC officers have lost due to the maintenance of separate promotion lists.

"Contrary to Congressional intent," Mr. Stevens states, JAGC officers have "been penalized" by the establishment of a separate list. His proposal, he said, will alleviate their plight "by transferring the names of the officers on the Judge Advocate's promotion list to the Army promotion list in the positions they would have attained if they had been on the Army list."

The separate promotion list for JAGC officers was established in 1948 under the terms of the Universal Military Training Act (formerly the Selective Service Act of 1948), to serve as a safeguard against the effect of "command influence" upon the proper discharge of legal duties by Judge Advocates of the Army.

At that time, it also was hoped that establishment of a separate list would serve as an inducement to retain the qualified JAGC officers then on duty and to attract other qualified law school graduates into the Service.

Instead, Mr. Stevens states, the establishment of a separate list "has worked to the detriment of the members of the Judge Advocate General's Corps."

Promotions for JAGC officers in certain grades have fallen behind those of their contemporaries on the Army list, he said, and the separate JAGC list "has not in any way served to attract and retain qualified persons as intended by Congress."

The Army Secretary also noted that "Experience in the Navy and the Air Force, which have no separate promotion lists for their law specialists and Judge Advocates, indicates that the establishment of a separate promotion list has, in practice, little bearing upon the problem of 'command influence'."

His proposal, he said, "will not in any way affect the independence of the Judge Advocate General's Corps, the susceptibility of officers of that Corps to 'command influence,' or the direction of Judge Advocates by the Judge Advocate General."

The Secretary submitted with his proposal a list of names of all Regular Army JAGC officers and the positions and grades they will attain if the measure becomes law.

Senate Votes Veterinary Corps Officers Equal Treatment With Medical Corps

Equal treatment of Army Veterinary Corps officers with other commissioned officers of the Army Medical Service was voted this week by the Senate.

Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R-NJ) noted that young officers coming into the Veterinary Corps at the bottom are commissioned as second lieutenants, with two years of constructive service to compensate for time spent in professional training, whereas physicians appointed in the Medical Corps are commissioned as first lieutenants with four years of constructive credit.

He said the scales were "fair and reasonable" when adopted in 1947, but since then the educational requirements for veterinary officers have increased. At present, he said, "there is considerable evidence to support a three-year credit with original appointment in the grade of first lieutenant."

The bill (S. 932) provides that officers of the Veterinary Corps who had less than three years' service credit as of 31 Dec. 1947 "shall, for promotion, seniority and promotion-list-position purposes, be credited as of that date with three years' service."

Those appointed and commissioned subsequent to 31 Dec. 1947, who at the time of appointment, were credited with less than three years' service, "shall, for promotion, seniority and promotion-list-position purposes, be credited as of the date of appointment with three years' service."

The measure provides that no back pay or allowances will accrue to such officers.

Army Sets 1 Jan. '55 For Launching Program To Split NCO-Specialists

The Army has set 1 Jan. 1955 as the effective date for the officially approved plan to separate soldiers in the top four enlisted grades into NonComs and Specialists.

Execution of the plan and the conversion of designated individuals in the top four enlisted grades to "Specialists" will be effected world-wide on the same day throughout the Army, including the Reserve components.

Concurrently, the Army will make sweeping revisions in MOS and TO&E set-ups.

The decision to distinguish between NCO's and Specialists follows favorable reception of the proposal in a world-wide survey.

The Army said the separation is "part of a plan designed to contribute to increased efficiency, improved discipline and greater enlisted esprit de corps."

Expectation is that with few exceptions present master sergeants (E-7) will continue to hold NCO status.

However, in the rank of corporal, the probability is opposite, with most of the present corporals expected to be classified as "Specialists."

Both temporary and permanent grades will be affected by the plan, which is intended "to increase NCO authority and responsibility as well as to enhance NCO prestige."

NCO titles and insignia will remain unchanged. Specialists will have new distinctive insignia and will rank among themselves as Master Specialist (E-7), Specialist First Class (E-6), Specialist Second Class (E-5), and Specialist (E-4). Regardless of grade they will be addressed as "Specialist."

In the enlisted structure of the Army, which contains seven pay grades, NCOs will continue to serve in the grades of Master Sergeant (E-7), Sergeant First Class (E-6), Sergeant (E-5), and Corporal (E-4). They will rank all other enlisted personnel with Specialists ranking next in order. However, there will be no changes in pay or related benefits as a result of the plan.

Any person in a Specialist assignment in the active Army at the time of conversion, and who previously held a leadership position in the same grade, may request retention of NCO status. Boards of officers appointed for this purpose will examine and render appropriate recommendations in each case. Administrative procedures have also been established to process similar requests from members of the Reserve components. Likewise, individuals who are informed that they will continue to be NCOs and who desire to be Specialists, may request appointments in the new category. In these cases unit commanders will make final decision and may effect the requested appointment.

Once an individual attains NCO or Specialist status within a pay grade, he will not lose it because of transfer to another unit or command.

Provisions of the plan specify the manner in which NCOs and Specialists will be utilized when assigned to groups performing labor duties. NCOs assigned to labor detail will be used as supervisors only, while Master Specialists and Specialists First Class normally will be exempted from such duties in recognition of their technical or administrative skills and positions. However, when the need arises for their services in labor assignments, they will act solely in supervisory capacities.

Privileges will continue to be granted to enlisted personnel in the discretion of the commander concerned, based on local conditions. In this connection, NCOs, because of their increased responsibilities, will be granted additional privileges by their commanders. The plan also provides that Master Specialists and Specialists First Class will be granted the same privileges as NCOs.

Efficiency Reports Due by 30 June, Army Says

To develop a standardized method of scoring the new Efficiency Report and to incorporate the 67-3 scores into the Overall Efficiency Index on each officer for 1954, the Army has announced that annual reports for the period ending 31 May must be in The Adjutant General's Office not later than 30 June.

The directive, contained in Circular 36, said that positive and effective control measures will be established within each command to assure that all efficiency reports are prepared accurately, and forwarded to The Adjutant General within the time limit specified.

Gen. Bolte Tells Why New Weapons Will Require More—Not Less—Men

An argument which the Army has been advancing in top Pentagon councils, namely that modern weapons will require greater battlefield dispersion of troops—and hence more of them—was presented on 15 April by General Charles L. Bolte, Vice Chief of Staff, in a speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington, D. C.

It is the contention of many Army tacticians that the threat of enemy use of atomic weapons and the necessity of massing the enemy's forces to provide worthwhile targets for our own powerful weapons will demand heavy infantry forces.

In this connection, here is what General Bolte told the Nation's top editors:

"In our planning we must anticipate that an enemy will have the capability to employ against us the weapons we can use against him. So we, ourselves, must be prepared to operate on the battlefield under the threat of modern weapons."

"Since, in the employment of any weapon, a suitable target is an important requirement, dispersion will be more pronounced than ever before and units will be more widely separated, one from another. This dispersion will be accomplished by greater depth from front to rear in addition to lateral dispersion.

"The greater area of the battlefield will in turn require larger numbers of men. Thus, even though the men are more widely dispersed and in smaller units, they will still be needed in great numbers and there is nothing to indicate that the demands upon our manpower will be lessened in any future war."

"Small unit actions will become more typical and decentralization of control more pronounced. The small unit leaders—the younger officers and the noncommissioned officers—will be called upon to a greater degree than ever before to make tactical decisions upon the battlefield. Modern combat thus places ever greater reliance upon the individual and especially on the leadership qualities of younger officers and noncommissioned officers."

"To use the more complex instruments of modern war properly requires men of higher caliber."

a Force of 180,000 officers!

That's what we serve. UNITED SERVICES AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION was organized in 1922 to provide low-cost automobile and household-personal effects insurance for Commissioned and Warrant Officers of the Armed Forces, overseas or in the states. And USAA continues to grow. During 1953, 180,000 officers of all branches were USAA policyholders and shared in dividends of $4,300,000—more than one million dollars over 1952.

Because all funds are pooled for mutual protection, USAA is able to offer low-cost insurance with savings realized in annual dividends. Besides the low cost of automobile and household effects insurance plans, more officers choose USAA because claims are settled quickly, even in the most out-of-the-way places.

Policies are available for Commissioned and Warrant Officers only, who are serving in JAPAN, WESTERN EUROPE, PUERTO RICO, PHILIPPINES, or in the STATES. USAA understands the officer's problems, for it is under the constant direction and management of retired officers of the Armed Forces.

Write now for more information on how USAA can serve you . . . and save you money. We are as close as your nearest mailbox, telephone or telegraph office. Your USAA Insurance becomes effective immediately as of time and filing date of application.

U. S. AIR FORCE

Special Wpns. Center Chief To Be Personnel Deputy

Maj. Gen. John S. Mills, commander of the Air Force Special Weapons Center at Kirtland AFB, N. M., since October 1950, will report to the Pentagon in June as Assistant, Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel.

He replaces Maj. Gen. Emery Wetzel, now commander of the Atlantic Division of MATS.

Named as General Mills' successor is Brig. Gen. William M. Canterbury, who now heads the 1009th Special Weapons Squadron, Washington, D. C.

The Kirtland Center under General Mills has provided air support and test facilities to the Atomic Energy Commission and other governmental agencies in the recent Nevada and Marshall Island atomic tests. During this time work was performed in research and development to incorporate atomic capability into all of the latest USAF aircraft.

General Mills was born in Appleton, Wisconsin, in 1906. He attended Lawrence College and in 1928 graduated from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

He entered primary flying school at Brooks Field, Tex., and received his pilot's rating in October 1929. The following month he was transferred to the Air Corps. During World War II he activated, trained and led in combat the 450th Bombardment Group (Heavy) in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations. In 1944, General Mills was appointed chief of the Operations Section, Mediterranean Allied Air Force in Italy. Returning to the United States in 1945, he began a tour of duty as Deputy Chief, New Developments

Maj. Gen. Mills

Division, War Department General Staff.

In July 1946, General Mills went to Quarry Heights, Panama Canal Zone, to become Deputy Chief of Staff of the Caribbean Defense Command—later redesignated the Caribbean Command. He returned to the United States in June 1948, and two months later entered the National War College in Washington, D. C. Upon graduation in June 1949, he became Deputy to the Assistant for Atomic Energy at USAF headquarters in Washington.

General and Mrs. Mills and their two children, Melinda and Jackie, will make their home in the Washington, D. C., area.

AF Register Out

The Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., reports that the Air Force Register for 1954, with 655 pages, is available at a cost of $3.50. The catalog No. is D 303-7:954.

Gen. Brown Named AMC Programming Assistant

Brig. Gen. C. Pratt Brown, USAF, special assistant to General E. W. Rawlings, commander of the Air Materiel Command, has been appointed Assistant for Programming at AMC.

He succeeds Col. Lawrence B. Ocomb, who will attend the Industrial College of the Armed Forces at Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C.

General Brown, who completed a course in advanced management at Harvard University in December 1953 has been serving as General Rawlings' special assistant. Before that, he was commander of Wright-Patterson AFB, O., for more than a year.

Talbott Will Dedicate Lab At New Bedford Site

Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott will dedicate the new laboratories of the Air Force Cambridge Research Center at Bedford, Mass., on 26 April.

The dedication will mark a further step in the gradual transfer of the Center's facilities from its present inadequate quarters to the modern new plant recently completed at Bedford.

Within the next two years, all facilities of the Center will be located at the $5-million Bedford site except for a number of research projects which require special areas and unusual conditions not found at Bedford.

The Center, commanded by Maj. Gen. R. C. Maude, USAF, joins nearby Lincoln Laboratories as part of a research and development area considered one of the most important in the country.

Maj. Gen. Maude

Shift AF Finance Chief To Denver, Deputy to D.C.

Maj. Gen. John R. Gilchrist, USAF, Director of Finance, will be assigned the additional duty of Commander of the Air Force Finance Center in Denver, on 31 July.

In the resumption of his former command, General Gilchrist will retain his present assignment as Director of Finance in addition to the Air Force Finance Center Command, a dual position similar to that which he held from June to October 1952 while he was first in command of the Denver facility.

Maj. Gen. Gilchrist

According to Lt. Gen. Charles B. Stone, III, USAF Deputy Chief of Staff, Comptroller for the Air Force, under whose organization the Director of Finance functions, the placement of the Director of Finance in Denver jointly with the command of the Air Force Finance Center, will result in better finance service, providing a centralized control in the finance area for staff work which would lead to a more streamlined, efficient and flexible finance service in the Air Force.

The greater portion of the Director's staff is located at the Air Force Finance Center, with a smaller group providing staff coordination in the Pentagon.

The new assignment will return General Gilchrist to the Command he first assumed in January 1951 when he was given the job of establishing and organizing the Air Force Finance Center. He continued as Commander of the center until October 1952, when he was reassigned to Headquarters USAF as Director of Finance.

The present Commander of the Air Force Finance Center, Brig. Gen. Richard L. Scott, will be stationed at Headquarters USAF in Washington as Deputy to General Gilchrist, in charge of the Headquarters Section of the Director's Office.

Industry "At the Front." In the highly scientific and mechanical warfare of today, it has often been stressed that the industries which manufacture supplies and weapons are as much a part of the defense team as the Armed Forces which go out to meet the enemy. As General Eisenhower pointed out in his final report as Chief of Staff of the Army, "The military establishment is only the cutting edge of the national machine * * * The material strength exerted through the Armed Forces is supplied by the industrial economy."

However, there is one phase of industry's participation in the defense effort which is little known to the general public—the thousands of "technical representatives" the manufacturing firms continually maintain with the forces of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps at home and abroad. Because their work is so little understood, it is particularly gratifying that Mr. Roger Lewis, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, made a tribute to them an important part of his first public speech since returning from his visit to the Pacific, the Far East, and Alaska.

"What was outstanding," Mr. Lewis said, "was the degree of teamwork in the field between the manufacturer who produces weapons and other equipment, and our Air Force people who use them. * * * On these combat bases in Korea, as on the rear bases in Japan, your technical representatives are worth their weight in gold. Although they have all the privileges and comforts of officers—which is not much in Korea—you will most often find them doing the dirty work shoulder-to-shoulder with mechanics and serving as life-saving trouble shooters. More important, they provide a valuable link in the transmission of late information from a factory to the field and important suggestions and criticisms aimed at product equipment from the field to the factory."

Mr. Lewis also pointed out that the Service has been short on military maintenance personnel because of the plaguing problem of securing and keeping qualified men. He went so far as to say that in view of this shortage of military maintenance personnel, the outstanding accomplishments of our logistical and maintenance bases in the Far East would not have been possible without the "devoted help" of the technical representatives of the manufacturers.

During the fighting, there were 350 "Tech Reps," as the Services call them, with the Air Force in Korea. The extent of their integration with the Armed Forces is indicated by the fact that three of them were killed and six wounded. Even today, in the Air Force alone, there are about 4,000 Tech Reps at installations all over the world.

The Services will join with Mr. Lewis in acknowledging their valuable contribution and giving them the credit that is their due.

Survivor Benefits. The Senate and House have acted expeditiously and wisely in voting a six-month extension of the time by which active personnel with more than 18 years service must decide whether or not they want to elect one of the options under the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act. The original law provided that such decisions must be made by 30 April 1954. The new amendment would extend it to 31 Oct. 1954. The change has not yet been signed by the President, but it seems assured that he will do so shortly.

The extension was necessitated by the fact that the law is so long and involved and in such technical language that few people outside the insurance business are able to understand it. To further complicate matters, the Board of Actuaries, set

Many others, too, have refrained from electing one of the options because they are having difficulty maintaining their home and family on their present income and feel that they would not be able to forego part of their reduced retirement pay for survivors' insurance.

Likes "German Uniform"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Reference comments by the two dough-foot colonels in the 10 April issue.

I personally am very much in favor of the new green uniform. Our broad minded, intelligent colonels could well use a little professional ethics in his speech. His reference to our looking like the Germany Army, is to me and a lot of other Regular Army junior officers, a compliment.

As for tradition I can't see where the colonels or their superiors have held to any traditions or said one word in defense of what the Army did as a matter of tradition.

No, I say hurray! we finally got rid of the sacks and will now at least dress half way like an army.

I have some 14 years service and thank God 6 years was with the USMC.

1ST. LT. ARMOR.

Why a Green Uniform?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

As an officer who has been retired for several years it ill behooves me to carp at the actions of those who are still carrying on on the active list. But I cannot help but feel that in the adoption of the newly christened "Army Green" uniform two errors are being made.

First, in trying to make the Army beautiful by changing the color of the uniform, the high command is attacking only a symptom of the basic trouble. Second, they are flouting the traditions of the Army by selecting a color which has not the least connection with the Army's past proud history.

OD has been with the Army in one or the other of its many shades for fifty years, since it was adopted by the Uniform Board of 1904. It was adopted not for its pleasing appearance, but because of its property of blending well with many backgrounds. However, it has been worn as field or garrison, or dress uniform by the Army during that whole period and the discontent with it never reached the heights which it now apparently has. If, now, those who wear that uniform are no longer proud of it, it would indicate that they are not proud of their service, and the remedy is to instill into them pride in their arm; to inspire an esprit de corps, and bring about a resultant rise in morale. Without this, not the new color, nor any color is going to make a soldier proud of his uniform.

However, the fifty year old OD has outlived its usefulness. It was adopted for field purposes and was used that way until 1917, the garrison and dress uniform during that period were the blue the Army wore from its Continental beginnings. After the First World War the stringent lack of funds which plagued the military caused the Army to make OD try to fulfill the opposite requirements of dress and field. Because it could not do this, the tailors came up with ever darker hues of OD and ever lighter tints of drab until the officers' green and pinks evolved. But the enlisted man still was clothed in an essentially field uniform. This was the condition when the Second World War broke over us.

During the war, the QM developed excellent combat uniforms which made OD obsolete for the field, and since it never was suitable for dress, it is time that it passed from the scene.

But why pick a color that has never had any association with the Army? From 1904 to 1917 the Army

Unfortunately, the Act does not provide any government financial assistance to provide survivor benefits for its retired Service personnel—it merely sets up a system whereby they can pay for such benefits themselves if they so desire.

Because of all the complexities that enter into making a decision as to whether or not to elect an option and if so which one to choose, the six-month extension is most welcome.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Two U. S. Army Eighth Air Force Bombardment Groups have received Presidential Citations for successful heavy bombardment missions against heavily defended important industrial targets in Germany. The 390th Heavy Bombardment Group was cited for conspicuous battle action and extraordinary heroism in connection with the highly successful bombing mission against Schweinfurt on 14 Oct. 1943. The 94th Heavy Bombardment Group was cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in connection with the bombing operation over Brunswick on 11 Jan. 1944.

50 Years Ago—The Paymaster General of the Navy has prepared and sent to the Secretary a comprehensive statement on the pay of the officers. This statement will form the basis, it is believed, for the appointment of a board to look into the whole question of Navy pay and bring it into harmony with that of the Army. When the House Committee on Naval Affairs voted not to report the bill abolishing the law giving officers stationed ashore 15 per cent less pay than when at sea, the committee passed a resolution calling upon the Navy Department for a full statement relating to pay.

90 Years Ago—At a late meeting of the Polytechnic Association of New York, the statement "that the Russians inaugurated horizontal shell firing" was corrected. "The fact is that the system is entirely American. The gun was invented by Colonel Bomford during the administration of Jefferson."

wore OD in the field and blue for all other occasions. Why not do the comparable thing now; use the combat uniforms for all field wear, and blue for garrison and ceremony? The marines proudly wear their blue dress, the Navy has never wavered from it, and the Army should not abandon the color which has been characteristically its own since its inception.

COLONEL, USA, RETIRED

Moved to Doggerel

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Sometimes the things we have to put up with move me to tears, sometimes curses, and sometimes doggerel:

I don't wanna trade my old O.D.'s
For some green-gray dungarees
'Cause I just don't have the cash on hand.

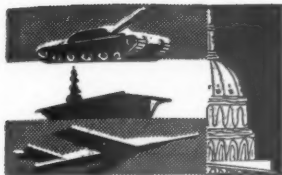

I don't wanna go off my beam
Over a textile salesman's dream
I'd rather be the unattractive dreg I am

All the JOURNALS that I read
Say much about a "new look"
I thought 'twas only ideas old
That were to get the big hook
I'm just a jug-head career man
Not a ten-thousand-a-year man
And I can't afford a new suit every day.
So just keep the old traditions
And never mind sartorial additions
And your soldier boy'll be OK.

If any of your staff wish to improve—and goodness knows it could stand it—they are welcome. Yours dejectedly,

GEORGE RUHLEN,
COL., ARTY.

SERVICE PERSONNEL who received "erroneous" payments for accrued leave when discharged for immediate reenlistment and who later had to pay back the money to the Government will have such amounts returned to them under the terms of a bill (S. 22) approved this week by the Senate. The measure validates such payments made since 31 Aug. 1946 and authorizes the Treasury to refund the money paid back by Servicemen. In cases where the man is deceased, the amount will go to his heirs.

MORE NACA professional personnel will be permitted to attend accredited graduate schools for research and study when the President signs HR 5627, approved this week by the Senate. The measure is designed to promote the National Defense and to contribute to more effective aeronautical research.

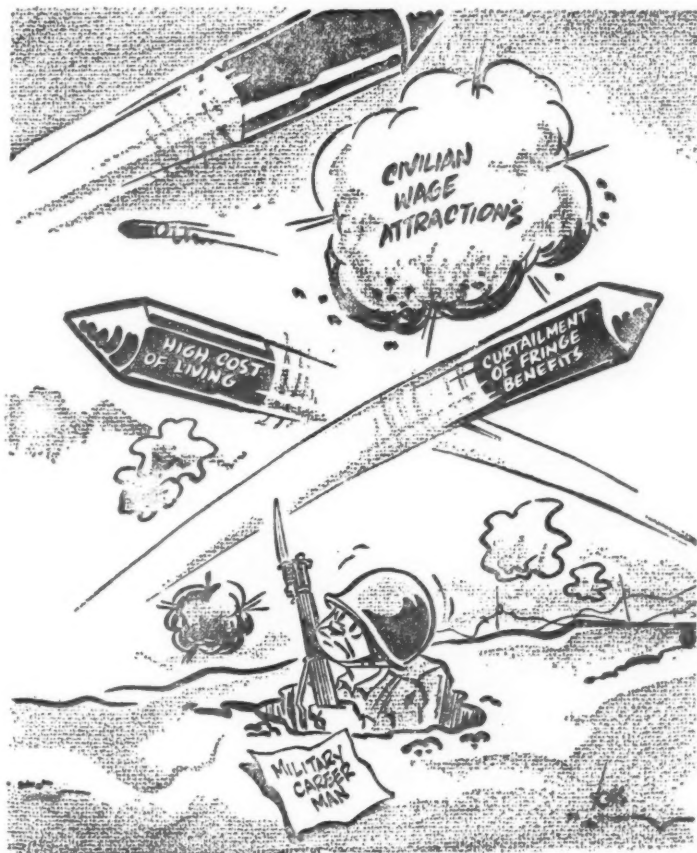

THE NUMBER OF NAVY OFFICERS serving in temporary ranks above their permanent grades has been revised again by the Bureau of Personnel. Navy spokesmen first told the House Armed Services Committee that only one Regular Navy officer is serving two temporary grades above his permanent rank. Later, this was corrected to "possibly 24." Now, the Senate Armed Services Committee has released another revision supplied by the Navy which shows that 46 Regular officers and one Reserve officer are serving two grades above their permanent rank. Additionally, 7,879 Regular officers and 4,299 Reserve officers are serving one temporary grade above their permanent rank.

MARINE OFFICERS serving in temporary grades above their permanent rank number 4,150 Regulars and 1,300 Reserves. Included in these figures are 95 Regulars and 12 Reserves who are serving two grades above their permanent rank.

NO "PARTICULAR INDIVIDUAL" was at fault or guilty of neglect" in the case of two young Marine Corps officer candidates who died of heat stroke following a hike at the Quantico Marine base last summer, a House Armed Services Subcommittee has concluded. The Subcommittee, headed by Representative William E. Hess (R-Ohio), noted that the Marine Corps has taken steps to develop the physical-fitness part of its training program "on a more gradual basis," and "Safeguards have been inaugurated in the training program to prevent, if possible, training fatalities from excessive heat." A study of heat stroke also has been undertaken by the Navy's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery to determine its underlying causes and to develop formulae "which might be utilized to determine danger levels." The Subcommittee recommended that "rigid application of physical requirements be made mandatory in the case of young men coming from civilian life as applicants for an accelerated training program."

A REENLISTMENT BONUS bill which got last minute "priority handling" at the Defense Department is now in the hands of the Budget Bureau. Assistant Secretary of Defense Hannah has informed Chairman Saltonstall of the Senate Armed Services Committee. Senator Saltonstall had asked for a report on the Department's delay in drafting the legislation which is expected to bolster the Services sagging reenlistment rate.

CONTINUED IMPATIENCE with delays in getting Defense legislation before the Armed Services Committees was made apparent this week when Senator Saltonstall commented on the impending plan to devise a more intensive program of Reserve training. He said his Committee is "endeavoring to stimulate the Department of Defense into submitting recommendations."

The Epochal Meeting at Geneva— COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

IN a period of great tenseness Secretary of State Dulles left Washington this week for a brief meeting of foreign ministers with the permanent NATO Council on Friday, followed by the journey to Geneva, where the international meeting on Far East matters will get under way on Monday. Rarely do the world's diplomats assemble for conversations whose trend is so unpredictable, and whose results could be so far from the hopes of friend and foe alike. Not the least curious aspect of the meeting is that even its original purpose—settlement of the Korean troubles—has lately been almost lost sight of by reason of the far larger problems of South-east Asia which have absorbed our attention and which are mounting toward a new military climax at the very moment when the political activities are at their height. If "almost lost sight of" by the American public, that original purpose certainly is not out of the memory of the Republic of Korea, which has sent its own delegation to Geneva bent on maintaining that priority of attention which the agenda concede. It is quite possible that the required discussion of Korean prospects, which interest the ROK delegation much more than Indo-China, may delay considerably the meeting's arrival at the Indo-China battleground. How much Korea interests us too is suggested by the Van Fleet mission, which was announced this week.

GENERAL JAMES A. VAN FLEET'S RETURN to the Far East next month as head of a temporary mission of inquiry is welcome. His service as a field commander and as a trainer of ROK forces is not quickly forgotten by his own countrymen or by the ROKs whose own desire to have him return as an adviser was manifest long ago. President Eisenhower's instructions to his special representative appear to call for an over-all study and for close relations not only with General Maxwell D. Taylor and General John E. Hull and Admiral Felix Stump but with President Rhee; the announced purpose is to arrive at "recommendations in concert with General Hull both as to the future size and composition of the active armed forces for the Republic of Korea and the practicability of a Joint U. S.-ROK program for Korean reserve forces." The mission, which will include Assistant Secretary of Defense Wilfred J. McNeil and a military-civilian staff from the several military departments, is to leave Washington about 1 May. Defense Secretary Wilson's own independent educational trip to the Far East is scheduled for ten days later.

GEN. VAN FLEET

KOREAN AFFAIRS certainly will not be General Van Fleet's sole interest (he will later go to Formosa) but Mr. Wilson remarked pointedly that there is not yet a decision on whether there will be a trip to Indo-China and that at present the mission has no bearing on Indo-China policy. Korea is enough of a worry, with the certainty that the United States must help that stricken republic for some time and wishes to do so in the most effective way; the mission would have gone ahead regardless of Indo-China. Much is to be decided about the necessary force level of the future, and the means of maintaining it. It is no doubt significant that the party includes Mr. McNeil, whose judgments on the dollar cost of those means should be of value.

U. S. AID TO INDO-CHINA took a somewhat new form this week when the 62d Troop Carrier Wing (Larsen Air Force Base, Wash.) was given the task of moving in their big C-124s an unstated number of French paratroopers from Orly Field, Paris, to Indo-China. There was meticulous attention to neutrality requirements, the French troops carrying no weapons with them, the planes alighting in non-combat areas from which French planes were to do the lifting into the battle region. Mr. Wilson, asked whether this operation was comparable to President Roosevelt's pre-war conveying of vessels across the Atlantic, and whether it could be thought of as a step toward war, answered both questions in the negative.

INDISCREET OBSERVATIONS about American Far East policy, supposedly both personal and off-record, aroused unusual heat both here and abroad during the past week, and a great deal of public clamor for knowing exactly what American plans are for the meeting of this or that future contingency. The blandness of these expectations is extraordinary. It is four years since a momentarily indiscreet American statesman made a public speech in which the probable unconcern of the United States, with regard to defending Korea, was frankly predicted. It was a very poor prediction, as June 1950 showed, but just criticism of that speech (as enabling an enemy to calculate on our military planning) has been voiced since then in tones of thunder by countless other statesmen. Yet now, in 1954, we witness the extraordinary sight of Americans of fairly high degree demanding that, all over again, the Administration or the State or the Defense Department or the military chiefs, or someone, state in clarion tones exactly what the United States armed forces intend to do if the Chinese do this or that. Ours is a remarkable country, and getting more so.

SECRETARY DULLES' DEPARTURE was preceded by White House conversations in which Congressional leaders of both parties participated. They apparently got the assurance that American troop-operation in Indo-China is neither imminent nor likely, but the further helpful reminder that it would be total folly to announce either the upper or lower limit of American intentions, even against a specific contingency. Mr. Dulles and his colleagues are moving into a meeting which calls not only for our best wisdom but for our highest skill in expression—and non-expression. It is yet to be seen how much pressure France can stand and how much will be applied, and it is a poor time for getting into unnecessary tangles with an ally whom we need so much and who is experiencing so severe a menace as Indo-China fighting provides. It is a poor time, too, for impolitic disputes with other allies, large or small, despite the temptation. Against both these follies Secretary Dulles has acted resolutely and wisely. He now faces what may be a prolonged test of America's diplomatic resources, where our enemies are many and determined and united in their world program, and where we and our allies suffer from those divisive and strength-sapping ailments which perpetually afflict democracies.

SENATOR McCARTHY'S ATTACK against Asst. SecDef H. Struve Hensel brought into the row a forceful personality, who knows his way around on the Washington scene and who is no believer in a "kid glove" reaction when his reputation is assailed. There was little doubt that the Army side of the controversy gained a powerful fighter for the Capitol scrap.

JUST AS IMPORTANT—perhaps even more so—was the belated statement by Defense Sec'y Wilson that the Senator's charges are having an adverse effect on morale. Heretofore, Mr. Wilson has declined from asserting such a conclusion publicly, apparently in a desire to ameliorate the dispute, if at all possible.

THE HANDS-OFF POLICY attempted by Mr. Wilson was dropped summarily at his news conference this week, when he stoutly defended Mr. Hansel and said that attacks on civilian officials would make more difficult the job of attracting high caliber men to serve in the Defense Dept.

ARMY OFFICERS COMMENTED privately that the Defense Sec'y now better than ever before could understand their reaction when Brig. Gen. Zwicker was abused by Senator McCarthy.

PENTAGON HASN'T GIVEN UP on proposal, now twice rejected by the Budget Bureau, to provide home loan benefits for the more than 100,000 Servicemen who have not had interrupted service and who therefore are not eligible for such aid. Defense Sec'y Wilson is expected to protest the BOB action, may even carry the fight to the White House.

OFF-POST SALUTING aimed at aiding Army esprit will be adopted, if recommendations of commanders throughout the U. S. are followed. They are reporting to the Pentagon that under the present set-up, many military personnel do not know whether to salute or not when off duty. The commanders who have been asked to comment on the proposal emphasize that the salute has traditionally been considered a privilege of the military profession and that it should be restored.

CHAGRINED AF OFFICIALS decline to say why the decision was made to reverse the order which would have required removal of "U.S." insignia from uniforms effective 1 July. It's no secret, however, that there were strong protests from AF officers and airmen and similar objections from numerous organizations, including the Daughters of the American Revolution, which called upon AF Sec'y Talbott for an explanation. He said the "U.S." insignia will remain. Beyond that, Pentagon authorities would say no more.

GEN. VAN FLEET'S new assignment recalls that it was in connection with his retirement at age 60 that the President just a year ago asked the Defense Dept. to look into the problem of retirement of senior generals prior to reaching statutory age of 62. Gen. Van Fleet is a USMA classmate ('15) of the President. So is Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, who recently retired at age 60.

PENTAGON STUDIES may result in a decision to retire even more generals at the age of 60, instead of 62, but with expanded authority for Service Secretaries to retain in active service officers with outstanding ability.

SEC'Y WILSON'S STATEMENT this week that the Defense Dept. intends to use all available talent in meeting its many problems suggests possible assignments for additional retired officers.

HELICOPTER STATURE in the Army continues to grow. First, there were Helicopter Transportation Companies. Now, at Ft. Bragg, N. C., the Army's pioneer Helicopter Transportation Battalion has been organized. The new unit is attached to the XVIII Airborne Corps.

COAST GUARD SPENDING in the fiscal year beginning 1 July will be almost exactly 10,000 times as great as the first USCG budget in 1790. The initial appropriation was for $18,560. For FY'55, the House has voted about $180,000,000.

MUSTERING-OUT PAY INEQUITY is demonstrated anew in Congressional hearings which show that Air National Guard cadets who go on active duty for the specific purpose of completing flying training and then returning to Guard status receive the special pay. This is not true, however, of other aviation cadets who complete training and go on active duty, or of other aviation cadets who wash out and who return to airman status.

NAME ATHLETE hearings scheduled to begin in the House next week won't mean a thing to Army's championship basketball team from Camp Chaffee, Ark. This was the only team in the All-Army field of nine quintets which did not have an All-American or a big name college player. Lt. Col. Milton Acuff is coach.

MORE ARMY 2D LTS. hold college degrees than in any other rank through Lt. Col. A recent survey shows that 70.6% of the 2d Lts. among male officers are college graduates, compared with 47.2 1st Lts., 32 Captains, 39.1 Majors and 62% of the Lt. Cols. Among the Lt. Cols., 59.6% of non-RA officers do not hold a college degree.

Will Your RETIREMENT INCOME FADE AWAY?

It won't if your current earnings are wisely invested. Don't let inflation sap the purchasing power of those retirement dollars you are counting on. Through convenient purchases of Mutual Investment Fund shares you can acquire dividend paying securities out of current earnings.

Nearly a million Americans, including many military and naval personnel, have invested over 3 billion dollars in Mutual Investment Funds—and the number grows daily. family hospitalization insurance...

at cost!

And that's exactly what I'm getting by mailing in my regular deposit to the Armed Forces
Medical Aid Association. I know that my wife and kids have top-notch hospitalization protection at the lowest possible damage to the pocket. Why? Because AFMAA is our own, non-profit, voluntary association.

Maybe that's why they call me
I. M. Ready — because I'm all set in case any of the family goes to the hospital. I know they'll get payments for hospital room, for surgery, for doctors' hospital calls, for emergency accidents, and even for maternity after a ten months' waiting period.

The cost is only $5.50 a month with wife only; $8.00 with kids.
Write — right now — to the lustrated booklet. I. M. Ready—

Brig. Gen. A. S. Newman Wins Airborne Wings

A brigadier general and two colonels were among the 14 officers and 32 enlisted men who received airborne wings last week at Infantry School graduation exercises, Ft. Benning, Ga.

Major Bolling in New Post

Maj. A. R. Bolling, Jr., son of Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, Third Army CG, has been appointed operations and training officer of the 30th Infantry Regiment at Ft. Benning, Ga.

Major Bolling was an instructor in battalion defense tactics and executive officer of the Attack Group at The Infantry School before assuming his new post. He has been at Ft. Benning since 1952 when he took the airborne and advanced officers' courses.

nean. Of these aircraft at least 50 per cent are jets and aboard the large carriers this figure approximates 75 per cent of the total. To further complicate the training and logistic problems the above types are found in many configurations designed for special missions such as airborne early warning, photo reconnaissance, night attack and all weather intercept.

The aircraft carriers also are of several different types. In addition to the large MIDWAY class (to be joined soon by the FORRESTAL) there are the ESSEX class attack carriers as well as the escort carriers currently used primarily for anti-submarine missions. Seaplane tenders include the large ALBEMARLE class and the smaller tenders such as the DUX-BURY BAY.

Training

The training of both the ships and aircraft squadrons is accomplished in cycles. That is to say, the training commences with basic or individual training and then gradually increases in scope until final deployment for full scale Fleet exercises. Upon completion of assigned deployments the ship or squadron returns to its home port for general refit or overhaul and reassignment of certain personnel after which the cycle is commenced once again.

For ships the cycle extends two years which is the average time between Navy Yard overhauls. Subsequent to the overhaul approximately 12 weeks is allowed for shakedown training in the Guantanamo area after which the ship is ready to spend the remainder of the cycle under assignment to Fleet Operating Commands, including those in the Mediterranean and Far East, or to the Type Commander for advanced training and development of tactics.

The cycle of aircraft squadrons is somewhat similar and extends over a period of approximately eighteen months. Due to the complexity of modern aircraft thorough and adequate training requires considerably more time than it did during World War II. The introduction of high performance jets together with associated armament and electronic equipment has imposed a heavy load on the individual pilot attempting to master the power and combat potential with which he is presented.

For training in operating and maintaining complex equipment several special units have been established for pilots as well as maintenance personnel. Typical of these are the Fleet All Weather Training Unit at Key West, the Instrument Flying Training Detachments at Quonset Point, Norfolk, and Jacksonville, and the Fleet Airborne Electronics Training Unit at Norfolk. The latter has also trained considerable numbers of French and British personnel.

Logistic support may be divided essentially into three categories: materials, trained personnel, and services.

The primary item in material support is, of course, new and replacement aircraft including replacement engines. These are received from the Bureau of Aeronautics and then assigned to tactical units as required. Timely provision of aviation equipment and spare parts also adds to the logistic load. The effort devoted to aircraft support is also shared by that required to coordinate the repairs, overhauls, and conversions of aircraft carriers. Added to all this support is the ever present problem of allotting and controlling operating funds.

The assignment of personnel to tactical units in such a way as to produce maximum operational readiness is accomplished through close coordination with the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and the Bureau of Personnel. The two main sources of pilots are the Shore Establishment and the Naval Air Training Command while aviation enlisted personnel are received from the Shore Establishment and the Naval Air Technical Training Command. In assigning personnel extreme care must be taken to ensure that first priority is given to those units subject to early deployment.

Services associated with logistic support of units of Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, are of a wide and varied nature. The most important services include the provision of: technical information, technical services (Naval and civilian), Aerological support, Navigational charts and publications, intelligence information and mobile base facilities.

The problems associated with logistic support described above are those inherent in any operation of such wide geographical scope, which ranges from Iceland to Panama and from Eastern United States to the Mediterranean. Further complications have been added due to the rapid turnover of personnel, and the introduction of new aircraft and new weapons.

Naval aviation is now experiencing the most rapid and extensive transition in its history and although many difficult problems are introduced the effort which must be expended in their solution will be a small price for the combat capability gained thereby. High performance aircraft, new and powerful weapons, helicopters for tactical use, canted decks and steam catapults for carriers, and improved detection and communication equipment are rapidly being integrated into the weapons systems employed by the air units of the Navy. Accordingly, Commander Air Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, looks forward to the future, confident that Naval Aviation will continue to fill the vital role in National Defense which it has so successfully filled in the past.

T-34 Factory Technicians
To Tour Training Bases

Technical personnel from Beech Aircraft will visit four Air Force bases in the next year to give instruction on piloting and maintenance of the Beechcraft USAF T-34 primary trainer.

Two representatives of the Beechcraft customer service department and one factory pilot will visit the bases on familiarization trips to acquaint pilots and mechanics on the use of the new plane.

The first Beechcraft crew left Wichita last week for Marana Air Base, Marana, Ariz. Other bases to be visited are Spence Air Base, Moultrie, Ga.; Bainbridge Air Base, Bainbridge, Ga., and Columbus Air Base, Miss.

The Beechcraft technical representatives will be available to offer assistance in formulating ground school instruction for pilot familiarizations, for instruction of maintenance personnel on the aircraft and its engine, and for assistance during routine inspections.

The factory pilot will be available to discuss and demonstrate all phases of T-34 piloting technique, including aerobatic flight and emergency procedures.

TEMCO Has Record Sales

Record net sales of $72,130,910 and increased activity in aircraft production, modification, design and research for 1953 were announced recently by TEMCO Aircraft Corporation in its annual report to stockholders.

TEMCO President Robert McCulloch and Executive Vice-President and Treasurer H. L. Howard described 1953 as the best year in the company's history. They added that diversified projects now underway, or pending, promise long-range company growth and security.

The officers noted that in spite of increasing competition in the aircraft industry, TEMCO now holds more than 20 contracts for production, overhaul, modification, research and development.

"Corporal" and "Honest John" Join Army's
Arsenal; Delivery Being Made to Troops

bility conditions place no restriction on the use of the weapon. Motive power is supplied by a powerful rocket motor. The missile travels through space at several times the speed of sound.

Essential components of the weapons system include the missile, a mobile launcher and guidance equipment. The launcher is a comparatively simple device consisting of a light metal take-off pedestal. A self-propelled, hydraulically operated erector places the missile in firing position on the take-off pedestal.

As early as 1944, the California Institute of Technology, under an Army Ordnance contract, began experiments in the application of rocket propulsion to artillery range missile. These predecessors of the Corporal were named the Private, the Private First Class, and the WAC Corporal. Much of the field test work was conducted at the Army's White Sands Proving Ground, in New Mexico.

The early success of the experiments and the great potentialities of rocket propulsion led to the establishment of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, an Army Ordnance owned installation operated under contract by the California Institute of Technology. Recognizing the progress made in the fields of rocket propulsion, aerodynamics and guidance, the Army requested the California Institute of Technology and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory to undertake a full-scale guided missile development project. The result of this program is the present model of the Corporal.

The Corporal Guided Missile is produced by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company and Glifflin Brothers, Inc. Delivery is being made to troops.

HONEST JOHN

The "Honest John," project name for a long-range artillery rocket, capable of carrying both atomic and high explosive warheads. The weapon will be used tactically to provide close fire support in ground combat operations.

Approaching the accuracy of standard artillery weapons, the "Honest John" is a free flight rocket as distinguished from guided missiles. Having no electronic controls, the "Honest John" rocket is simple in design and simple to operate. Normal crew training and standard fire control techniques are employed. Range is equivalent to that of medium-to-long range artillery. The weapon has considerably more battlefield mobility than conventional artillery and one high explosive round can deliver on a target the same demolition effect of hundreds of artillery shells.

The "Honest John" consists of a rocket weighing several tons and a highly mobile, self-propelled launcher. The rocket itself comprises a forward compartment which houses the warhead; a motor at the center, in which the rocket propellant is fitted; and a fin assembly at the rear.

Major parts of the "Honest John" rocket—such as the head compartment, pedestal and motor, and fin assemblies, are assembled at the factory or arsenal. Final assembly of the explosive warhead and fins to the rocket occurs at a point close to the firing site. Once assembled, the rocket is moved rapidly forward on a self propelled launcher. On site, the rocket is aimed much the same as a gun is laid on its target, and fired.

The development history of "Honest John" is brief considering its importance as a primary weapon. Studies for a large caliber artillery rocket were begun by Army Ordnance in May 1950. Shortly thereafter, Douglas Aircraft Corporation submitted proposals for a rocket based on Ordnance specifications. Initial firing tests completed at the White Sands Proving Ground in August 1951 justified production of additional models. By January 1953, further successful tests with improved rockets manufactured by Douglas and fired from self-propelled launchers, developed by Army Ordnance, resulted in contracts for large scale production of the present type rocket. Delivery is being made to troop units.

USCG Medical Care Bill Is Approved
By Senate; Heads For House Action

The Coast Guard medical care bill was approved this week by the Senate and now goes to the House where it is expected to receive early consideration.

The measure (S. 3255), sponsored by Senator Wayne Morse (I-Ore), provides for the hospitalization and treatment of members of the Coast Guard and their dependents in hospitals and other medical facilities of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Such hospitalization and treatment is confined to localities where no Public Health Service medical facilities are available to members of the Coast Guard or their families.

Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R-NJ), member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the measure will "correct an inequity which has caused understandable dissatisfaction."

At present, active duty CG personnel can be hospitalized, on a reimbursable basis, at other Armed Forces installations, but no provision is made for their dependents stationed in the same area. Care given to all dependents is on a "space available" basis and Senator Hendrickson notes "What the bill does is simply to spread this care, perhaps a little thinner."

"Explosion" Requirement Eliminated In Capitol Dual Pay Restriction Revision

The Office of the Chief of Army Finance this week released a statement explaining how recently enacted legislation will remove an inequity in pay benefits for commissioned officers retired because of physical disability resulting from an instrumentality of war.

Heretofore, it has been essential that an explosion was connected with the disabling accident. This is no longer the case. All officers retired as a result of disabilities caused by an instrumentality of war will be exempt from the $3000 dual compensation ceiling—whether or not there was an explosion does not matter.

Here is the complete text of the statement made by the Army's Office of the Chief of Finance:

Commissioned officers retired for disability caused by an instrumentality of war are now exempt from the statutory limitation of $3000 a year dual compensation. It is now possible for them to draw both disability retired pay and compensation as Federal civilian employees of more than $3000 per annum.

THE ACT OF 20 FEBRUARY 1954 (Public Law 300-83d Congress) amends Section 212 (b) to make this exemption. The purpose of this legislation is to eliminate the unjustified preferential treatment accorded by a 1932 "dual compensation" statute to one group of commissioned officers who are retired for disability over other such officers. It is retroactive to 1 January 1951.

Legislative Calendar

Senate

Passed the following bills:

HR 7103, establishing legal ceilings on the number of commissioned officers in grades above major and removing retirement restrictions.

HR 8539, extending for one year the period of election under USCOA for active duty personnel with 18 or more years' service.

S 3255, providing medical care for members of the Coast Guard and their dependents in Armed Services hospitals.

S 22, validating certain payments for accrued leave made to members of the Armed Forces who accepted discharges for purpose of immediate reenlistment.

S 3197, authorizing the acceptance of conditional gifts to further the defense effort.

S 932, equalizing treatment accorded to Veterans Corps officers with that accorded other officers of the Army Medical Corps.

S 1754, amending the Dependents Assistance Act of 1950 to provide punishment for fraudulent acceptance of benefits thereunder.

HR 5627, increasing the amount to be expended annually for graduate study for professional personnel of the NACA.

HR 7512, providing for conveyance of Camp Blanding to State of Florida.

HR 6896, extending the time for filing war claims by former WW II prisoners of war.

Introduced:

S 3305 (Sen McCarran, D-Nev), authorizes payment of certain claims arising out of the sequestration by the Imperial Japanese Government of credits of members of the military and naval forces of the US and other US nationals in the Philippines.

S 3334 (Sen Saltonstall, R-Mass) authorizes appointment of female nurses in the National America gave the world the airplane.

HR 8865 (Rep O'Neill, D-Mass), prohibits assignment of certain duties to members of the Armed Forces.

Lt. Col. Saulnier To 5th

Lt. Col. Dorothy M. Saulnier, ANC, who recently completed a course in nursing education at the University of Minnesota, has been named Chief Nurse of the Fifth Army.

She succeeds Maj. Edith A. Aynes, who reports 1 May to the Brooke AMC at Ft. Houston, Tex., as an instructor at the Medical Field Service School.

Prior to her return from the Far East 16 months ago, Major Aynes served as Chief Nurse of the 279th General Hospital at Osaka, Japan, and Chief Nurse, Medical Section, Headquarters, Japan Logistical Command.

Ask Col. Hewitt's Appointment

The Army has submitted legislation to Congress to authorize appointment of Col. Leland Hazelton Hewitt, USA-Ret., as U. S. Commissioner, International Boundary and Water Commission, United States and Mexico.

Section 212(b) of the Economy Act of 1932, as amended (5 U.S.C. 59a) in general prohibits the receipt of both military retired pay and pay as civilian employees of the Government if the combined amount exceeds $3000 a year. Exceptions are provided if the disabilities are incurred as the result of (1) combat with an enemy, or (2) explosion of an instrumentality of war. The unjustified preferential treatment arises in connection with the second exception.

For example, an Air Force officer retired for disability incurred when his aircraft crashes and explodes could draw both his disability retired pay and salary as a Federal employee regardless of the combined amount. On the other hand, a brother Air Force officer who is retired for an identical disability incurred when his aircraft crashes but does not explode, could not be paid as a civilian employee of the Federal Government so long as he is receiving disability retired pay, if the combined amount exceeded $3000 per annum.

THIS LEGISLATION PLACES all classes of officers on an equal footing so far as concerns entitlement to receive both disability retired pay and compensation as Federal civilian employees, if their disabilities were caused by instrumentalities of war.

This new legislation in no way effects the rights of enlisted personnel to draw dual compensation in excess of $3000, for they have not been governed by this statutory limitation.

ANY INQUIRIES concerning the retroactive provisions of Public Law 300 should be referred to Commanding General, Finance Center, U. S. Army, Indianapolis 49, Indiana, Attention: Chief, Retired Pay Division.

AF ACADEMY SITE

The Air Force will announce in two or three weeks the choice of a site for the new Service Academy.

Shortly thereafter, the Air Force will select a civilian architectural-engineering firm or combination of firms to design and build the Academy.

Congress has approved authorization legislation providing $125,000,000 for the work.

Sec'y Talbott Urges Military Pay Raise, Editors Told Service Morale Problems

Government money, a rise in reenlistments "would provide an overall improvement in the efficiency of the Air Force. The solution to this problem lies in making Air Force service more attractive."

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens stated in his section of the semi-annual summary that "it is of the utmost importance that everything possible be done to maintain a career military service, clothed in dignity and honor, which will be attractive to the highest type of young American and which will hold the high quality personnel we now have."

"I consider it urgent," said Secretary Stevens, "that immediate steps be taken to insure the continued development of the finest type of military leadership."

The comments by the Service Secretaries in the semi-annual reports were made public less than a week after similar reports on Service morale were made to the American Society of Newspaper Editors meeting in Washington, D. C.

At these sessions, the nation's top editors learned details of the problem confronting the Armed Forces in attracting and retaining outstanding personnel and the steps which are being taken to improve the situation.

A highlight of these presentations was the observation by Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah that study is being given to the possibility of a pay raise for men and women in uniform, particularly if new pay legislation is adopted for the Government's civilian employees.

OPPOSE COMMO. PROMOTION

Promotion of Reserve commodores to the rank of rear admiral, as provided in the House-passed Reserve Officer Personnel Act now under study in the Senate, is opposed by the Navy. The provision, according to Assistant Navy Secretary James H. Smith "would depreciate the selections which have been and will be made to the grade of rear admiral in the Naval Reserve" and would necessitate additional legislation to provide like promotions for 78 Regular officers retired in the rank of commodore.
